COMMUNICATION SKILLS (1 ST YR)

NOTE TAKING; is an individual process that contains series of complex activities. Why we say its an individual process it means that every person has their own way of expressing their own materials or notes we call it individualism,
-it is a passive activity of simply writing down words,
-it is a way to record and range thoughts and materials to make you remember some information.

WHERE NOTES ARE TAKEN:
We take notes in a classroom situation or lecture rooms, but also in meetings, in work shops and other related locations such as churches.

WHY DO WE TAKE NOTES?
Make you concentrate on what you are learning, or what is presented by the presenter.
To put ideas into your own words, meaning what you hear should be interpreted into your own words.
Help you remember things better, meaning what you write with your hand in your own words you will surely remember easily.
Help us to record perfectly or properly.
Help us to write information which may not be available in other sources. Example lecturers give information which is not written any where.
Help us to identify important points, important points are identified by not writing everything meaning you only take few key points
It helps you to organize your mind, meaning it organizes your writings and ideas.
to become actual part of listening, meaning that we have to be good listeners so as to take good notes.

WHAT DO WE WRITE

Definition of new terms, meaning once there is a new term what your supposed to do is to make sure you write down the definition because a definition is a fact.
The formula or guideline, something that will lead you to something.
Write down specific facts,
Materials written on the board or presented.
Repeated words, words that are mentioned more then two times.
Reviews given at the beginning of the class, or in other words the layout meaning even in a meeting there is supposed to be a layout of what will be discussed.
The summaries that are given at the end of the presentation.
We write down references and other sources, doing an academic work there has to be references.
Emphasized points. How we know emphasized points,
-through the tone of the voice and gesture of the speaker, meaning the rising up and down of the tone. Gestures are whatever what the speaker does.
-the amount of time spent on one point. If that person spends a lot of time on one point it shows emphasis.
-the number of examples given, if a person gives many examples on a certain point then he is making emphasis.

WHY DO WE WRITE OR TAKE NOTES ON OUR OWN WORDS?
To match with the speed of the speaker or presenter.
To have time to notice facial expressions and gestures.
interpreting concept easily.

NOTE TAKING TECHNIQUE

CONVECTIONAL SYMBOLS AND SIGNS: some common symbols which many writers use are example the word equal use (=), less (<) or greater then (>), positive sign (+), negative (-) or and (&), times(x)

OMMISSION OF VOWEL: instead of writing between you write (btn)
OMMISSION OF CONSONANTS:
USE OF NUMBERS: to (2) or for (4) and (9)
USE OF ABBREVIATION & SHORTCUTS: United Nation (UN) automatic teller machine (ATM).
USE OF COLORS TO REPRESENT WORDS: red means danger, or stop and green may mean go.
OMMIT WORDS THAT DO NOT CARRY MEANING:

THE CONTEXT OR ENVIRONMENT OF THE NOTE TAKER
PHYSICAL CONTEXT: a note taker has no control of a social or geographical situations in which he or she takes the note example bad smell. Physical environment has great influence in note taking meaning the note taker may get problems to listen to the presenter or speaker, by social we mean problems that everyone has.

THE SPEAKER: meaning that a note taker has no control on the speaker, sometimes note taker face difficulties on speaker's personalities, example you see a bartender in a bar then the next day you see that person as your teacher you will have a hard time to understand that person, but sometimes the speaker may speak at a low voice or too loud, or sometimes the speed, or he may be abusive

HOW CAN WE OVERCOME BARRIERS TO EFFECTIVE NOTE TAKING?

LISTENING SKILLS

LISTENING; Is an active decision to be fully attentive and to understand the intent of the speaker. It is a conscious activity of making a follow up to the presenter, it is a grand process which consumes time and requires both physical and mental energy to concentrate. It should not be confused with hearing, hearing is a non planned process and there is no concentration to it, meaning it happens automatically, it is a subconscious activity, it is an involuntary process.

Or is an active decision made by a person to be attentive so as to understand the actual intentions of the speaker, therefore it is a process and should not be confused as hearing because hearing is done unconsciously meaning that it happens without you wanting it to happen.

REASONS TO IMPROVE LISTENING
Encourage others to listen, if one person says to pay attention then the other people will also pay attention to listen.
So as to posses all information that is spoken.
To solve problems, incase of conflicts we need attentive listening.
Improves understanding, in most cases people don't understand because they do not pay attention

TYPE OF LISTENING

APPRECIATIVE LISTENING: it does not focus on the message but focuses on the attitude of the speaker or mood. Such listeners want to enjoy the speaker. It just makes the speaker think that the audience is supporting me.

DISCRIMINATIVE LISTENING: it is listening that is interested in the conclusion given by the speaker, meaning from the beginning they don not pay attention. They do this because they want to judge the speaker's position.

THERAPEUTIC LISTENING: this s the type of listening which needs emotional support and psychological satisfaction. Such listeners wont write anything because they need to understand your emotions. This kind of listening is good when someone needs advice, do not give an advice if your are not 100% sure of what you are saying.

LISTENING FOR COMPREHESION: it involves getting the main points asking for clarification, asking questions and identifying key issues.

CRITICAL LISTENING; it allows debate, it asks questions like why, how, when, who and where. It deepens the understanding of the listeners and it id used in academic context.

BARRIERS OF LISTENING

n

PASSIVE LISTEING: this is when a listener is not interested to listen. Many students do not do good in school because they are not ready to listen. This is when a listener is not ready to listen or not interested to listen and that is the reason why many students in school fail because they are not ready to listen to their teachers

DRIFTING THOUGHTS: this means that someone's mind is somewhere else, listeners are always controlled by emotions and they move away mentally from what is being presented.

PASSED EXPIRIENCE ABOUT THE SPEAKER: this means that the speaker might be a Bar maid and you see that person in a lecture room giving a lecture it will be hard for a person to listen to him carefully.

PROBLEMS CAUSED BY THE SPEAKER, one of the problem may be speed of speaking, volume , accent and choice of words, meaning some people may speak very fast which will make other people not understand, some people may talk in a low voice which will make the listeners not to listen, and some spears do not have the good choice of words.

NOTE MAKING : this is the second activity after taking notes it involves the planned process where by a listener take time to search and compile the materials those obtained from the class room and from other sources such as the internet.

IMPORTANCE OF MAKING NOTES

to get more information from the texts books or other sources.
Help to train a critical mind. Critical means reading books and get a lot of knowledge from different sources.
Helps in providing records of essential points, records mean documents that are found in books that you have read.
Helps to develop your memory meaning that once a person makes notes he will be having a lot of materials in his mind or brain.
Helps to organize your ideas and highlight areas that you need to develop further. People organize their ideas and incase you're in the library your reading you will be highlighting some important points.

SUMMARY WRITING: A summary is a shortened version of the original text. A summary should reflect the entire text/work. A summary should include the thesis and major supporting points. the summary should reveal the main ideas and other ideas , and the ……. It is a significant reduction of the original text.

SUMMARY WRITING TECHNIQUES

PARAPHRASING: it means expressing other people's ideas by using your own words. In such a summary we will not see direct words from the passage.

IMPORTANT OF PARAPHRASING

Helps you to understand the original text better.

Helps you to get the main ideas and the main points.
Helps to write a brief summary and concrete with your own words.
GRASPING THE CENTRAL IDEA
We summarize to get the main idea and the general subject matter of the material.
IDENTIFYING THE TOPIC SENTENCE: where by the topic sentence always appear on the first paragraph usually the first sentence.
SUMMARIZE BY SUPPORTING THE IDEAS

ESSAY WRITING, REPORT WRITINGAND CITATION

ESSAYS

There are 2 types of essays
Short essays
Long essays
The short esays have only 3 parts while the long essays have 7 parts.

SHORT ESSAY: this is an essay which is usually written in classes and used in exams and assignments. In any assignment you have to know what type of essay is needed.

-we start writing the essay by analyzing keywords, which are the words in the assignment that tell you the approach you should take in answering the question, these words can be task words, content words or limiting words.

TAKS WORDS: are verbs in the question that direct and tell you how to go about answering the question. Understanding the meaning of the verbs they will help you to know exactly what you are supposed to do.

CONTENT WORDS: are words that tell us about the topic and direct to the area of an assignment, half of the assignment are taken by content, the content is narrowed down so as to. They help us to focus the exact area where answers are obtained.

LIMITING WORDS: these words bound you when answering the question, meaning there shouldn't be any exaggeration, they focus on the topic area and they direct you to the specific aspect you should concentrate example

Computers have had a significance impact on education in the 20 century discuss changes that they have made?

In this question

-task word is discuss

-content words are education and computer,

-Limitation word is changes in 20th century and significance impact.

Compare your own education to date with that of your own parent one of your children (if you have any) or a friend from a different generation. Which point of comparison seems important to you and why?

-Task word is Compare

-Content Words Education of your parents, one of your children and friend from a different generation.

-Limitation: your parents, children and friend, different generation, importance.

COMMON KEY WORDS AND DEFINITION THAT HELP YOU TO THINK ABOUT YOUR ASSIGNMENT

INFORMATION WORDS: these are words which ask you to demonstrate what you know about the subject such as who, what, when, where, how and why. Under information word you may get a words such define.

to define: give the subject meaning according to someone. Sometimes you have to give more than one view on the subject meaning.

Explain: means o give reasons on why and examples on how something happened.

Illustrate: this means to give descriptive examples on how the subject and show how it is connected with the subject. This is not an easy question.

Summarize is to briefly list the important areas that you learned about the subject.

Analyze: to determine how individual part create or relate to the whole. Figure out how something went, what it might mean or why it is important.
Argue: means to take a side and defend it with evidence against another side.

TRICKS THAT DO NOT WORK WHEN WRITING THE ESSAY

Spending more time on the cover page then the essay.
Using huge font, wider margins or extra spacing.
Use of a paper from another class or group.

OUTLINING THE ESSAY: INFORMAL OUTLINE

This is a planning of writing an essay which will help you organize and structure your ideas. From the essay outline you can know if you are in the right track or not. It can be informal meaning not well structured, an informal outline simply writes down the thesis statement. Write down what will be introduced and what will be discussed and what will include the conclusion .N.B All writing you do in essay writing needs and introduction. In the introduction we speak about the background or history of your topic. In the body paragraph we explain what is currently happening or what needs to happen in the future, sometimes we discuss or sometimes we give solutions and many other things. In the conclusion we look to the future by focusing on what is going to happen.

FORMAL OUTLINE: this is an outline that has a lot of details that are included, it has got title and numbered sub headings. They are given in numbers so as to to how relationship between one part and the other part. It will contain more detail information and if there are certain areas that your assignment requires you to cover or make modification. You can expand it until your information is done. An outline allows the writer to categorize the points to organize the paragraph into an order that makes sense. An outline helps to prevent a writer from getting stuck. It also gives you a mark of where to go with your essay. A well developed outline will show what the thesis, main ideas are and the evidence which support you in your essay.

CITATION / REFERENCING AND ACKNOWLEDGING SOURCES:

How to write reference
How to cite
How to acknowledge pieces of work?

REFERNCING: is a way of making citation of sources or materials from different authors and acknowledging them.
We normally cite down important information that we need for our assignment.

BASIC TYPE OF SOURCES THAT ARE MOST CITE:

BOOKS: these are the first sources of students we need them because they are published materials, you should make sure u cite a book at the same level with your knowledge.
PERIODICALS: these are publications that are printed out and used as sources.
REFERENCE MATERIALS; this includes online materials that are connected to your area sometimes even the email you can cite your work or even the television or news papers. You should not cite online materials because not all of them are from good authors.

WHY DO WE MAKE REFERENCE OR CITE?

To acknowledge other people's work or appreciate his work meaning for appreciation.
Enable your readers to explore more or make further investigation.
To show how intensive your work is meaning deep it influences people to read.
Used for future references meaning writing your work involving a certain book after 10 years you can use it for citing again.
To trace the origin of ideas meaning where they came from.
To build our own web of ideas
Helps you to find out your own argument or thinking.
It validates the arguments

To avoid plagiarism meaning using other people's work without acknowledging them.
To meet criteria for marking

2nd SEMESTER

1ST MODE COMMUNICATION: THE CONCEPT AND PROCESS

COMMUNICATION: is the termed which is more familiar to us, it is an activity that we perform everyday and every time. Human beings started communication once they were born.
Communication is the act of conveying information for the purpose of creating a shared understanding. Communication is something that human beings do every time and everyday whether speaking or silent. The word communication comes from a Latin word with the Latin word "communis" which means to share verbal(sound), non verbal and electronic means of human interaction. Human beings convey information or communicate through a variety of methods.

METHODS OF COMMUNICATION

SPEAKING: this is a common way of communicating used by human beings. Such as telling stories.

TELEPHONE: may be used for far communication. Although we ca not understand the behavior of the person.

BLOGS:

TELEVISIONS: where by people watch the news and know what is going on

RADIOS:

ART: by drawings or statues they convey a special message or communicate with the people.

HAND GESTURES: communicating using hands

FACIAL EXPRESSION: face language (life is perceived when your eyes are closed.

BODY LANGUAGE:

Communication can occur instantaneously (within a short time) in a closed, intimate settings or great period of time in large public forums like internet. Although only the people with the access of the internet can see that particular information. All forms of communication require the same basic elements of communication. The act of communicating draws or demands several interpersonal and intrapersonal skills like listening, observing, questioning, processing, analyzing and evaluating. Communication is the act of using words, sounds (such as drums and whistles), signs or behaviors to express or exchange information or express your ideas thoughts, feelings etc. to someone else.
Communication is the process of transferring information from one person to another and it can occur across vast distances in time and space.
Communication refers to the activity that serves to connect people through space and time.
The communication process is complete once the receiver had understood the message sent by the sender and given back an appropriate feedback.

Communication is a two way traffic meaning there is sending and receiving.

ELEMENTS OF COMMUNICATION / COMPONENTS

These are the main components of communication

SENDER: the sender is the person who intends to convey the information. Or a person who starts or initiate the conversation. A sender can be an individual speaking, writing, signaling or gesturing.
MESSAGE: is a piece of information that is transferred from the sender to the receiver, it I what the sender wants to convey. The message could be positive, negative or neutral.
CHANNEL: this is the root or way through which the message is transmitted from the source to the receiver and vice versa. This is the form in which an idea or feeling is delivered through. In spoken communication channel includes the following.
Face to face
Telephone
Video conferencing or audio conferencing

In written communication channel it includes

- letters
- emails
- memos
- reports

RECEIVER: This is a person who receives the message he may be one person or a big number of people, this is what we call the audience, a receiver may be close or at a distance where by there is a difference when you speak to a receiver who is near by and far away.

Communication is complete once the receiver gives back the feedback. The receiver may give the feedback by speaking, giving sign or by writing FEEDBACK: this is a verbal or non verbal reaction from the audience who receive the message. This is the effect action or comment that comes after the message.

NOISE: anything that interferes with communication process at any stage is referred to as noise. It does not need to be sound it may be physical or Physiological.

TYPES OF NOISE

PHYSICAL NOISE; this is any internal barrier that infers with communication to both the speaker and listener. It depends on the condition meaning weather condition, or sun shine un random movement. It destructs the physical transmission of signal or message.

PHYSIOLOGICAL: this is the kind of noise that is created by barriers within the sender or receiver. This means a speaker may have physiological noise and receiver.

EXAMPLE OF PROBLEMS OF SPEKEAR SIDE

articulation problem

talking too fast (stammering)

talking too slow (brain problem)

forgetting to pause

forgetting to breath (stress)

EXAMPLE OF PROBLEMS OF THE LISTENER SIDE

Hearing problem
Difficult to hear

PSYCHOLOGICAL NOISE: this is associated with mental interference, meaning that something interferes into your mind. This I the destruction caused by physiological process that interferes with communication process.

EXAMPLE OF PSYCHOLOGICAL

Wondering of thoughts: these are obstacles caused by destruction and difficulties in listeners' mind.

Preconceived ideas: meaning having your own ideas meaning having your own knowledge which in that case it is wrong while you think that you are correct. this is the kind of noise which occurs when the audience thing that they already know something about the topic.

SARCASM: this is the noise which occurs when the listener disagrees with you.

SEMANTIC NOISE: this is the kind of noise associated to meaning assigned to a certain word, this occurs when the speaker and listener have different meaning. Sometimes the audience may not understand you because of your choice of words.

EXAMPLES OF SEMANTIC NOISE:

Jargons and other abusive language.
NB: we should always remember that nay communication is a 2 way process where by the message in the form of ideas, feelings and opinions is transmitted between two or more persons with the intention of creating a shared understanding.

Effective communication is achieved when the message conveyed by the sender is understood by the receiver in exactly the same way it was intended.

Communication is a dynamic process that begins with concepts or ideas by the speaker and transmitted in the form of the message through the channel to the receiver who in time gives the feedback in the form of the message or signal with the given time frame.

The transfer of message from the sender to the receiver through different stages and back again to the sender is what is known as communication process. It means there are different activities done for the communication process to be complete which involves the sender, channel and receiver.

COMMUNICATION MODULE / THEORY

Communication experts and scholars have described different module of communication.

ARISTOTLE MODULE OF COMMUNICATION: he made a scientific investigation on language and developed a module of communication known as lineal module of communication. This was the first module of communication, and it is the most accepted module. He mainly focused on the speaker and the speech and he divided communication process into 5 primary elements.

THE FIVE PRIMARY ELEMENTS

A SPEAKER: according to Aristotle a speaker has a great influence.
SPEECH
OCCASION OR SITUATION
AUDIENCE
EFFECT

This module is speaker centered, any communication is determined by the speaker. The role of the speaker is to be an active personnel in the communication. The speaker delivers or conveys a speech to the audience he or she can determine which median to use. the role of the audience is passive; the audience is influenced by the speaker. According to Aristotle communication is a one-way process. The speaker must organize the speech before hand according to the targeted item. When we say one way a good example is soldiers, once a soldier is given orders he can never disagree its always a "YES". Aristotle module identifies three elements which are sender, message and receiver. But it is sunder centered. When the sender sends a message then communication has started. In this mode the response of the receiver is not focused

NEW COMB COMMUNICATION MODULE:
This is a triangular communication module where there is the sender, receiver and the topic. According to him if any third party exists between the sender and the receiver the third party will affect communication. The main idea of this module is that the sender and receiver relies upon the third party to communicate. Communication will proceed if there is trust upon the third party, if there is no trust the communication will be destructed. He further emphasizes that the main purpose of this theory is to introduce the role of communication in a social relationship. Good relationship maintains social equilibrium between the society and the communication itself. The topic is the matter of concerned.

THAYER'S ORGANIZATION/ COMMUNICATION MODULE:

this is the module which clearly stated that an individual can influence an organization through his organization process. Thayer mentioned 4 aspects which affect communication process btn the sender and receiver

ASPECTS THAT AFFECT COMMUNICATION

INDIVIDUAL
INTERPERSONAL (what you communicate within yourself)
ORGANIZATION (how is ur society or organization)
TECHNICAL (related with means in which we communicate)

SCHRAMM CIRCULAR MODEL OF COMMUNICATION

This mode is in general known as the process and effects of communication this model present the complete treatment of the fundamentals of communication. According to him to know how to communicate or to know how communication works it is necessary to study the communication process in general. In any communication two people are involved, these people they share information, ideas and an attitude meaning mood. In this process of sharing at least three elements are involved the communicator, message or content and the destination or receiver. He emphasizes that communication can happen within a person or ourselves INTRACOMMUNICATION or between two people which is INTERPERSONAL COMMUNICATION. Each type of communication whether intra or inter both a sender and receiver use their knowledge to interpret the information. In communication encoding interpretation and decoding take place simultaneously. In this model communication ends up where it started, in fact as communication goes on the noise gets less or more powerful. Personality is more important for effective communication. If we consider that the source and the encoder are one person, decoder and destination are another person and the signal is language. In general this model suggested the importance of encoding and decoding process as well as the role of field of experience

SHANNO WEAVER: this model shows the transmission of the message from the source to the destination, the model sets basic constituents that not only explain how communication happens but why communication sometimes fails. Good timing plays a great role in communication, he emphasizes that always the sender initiates communication basing on his or her thoughts and transmit information through a selected media to the receiver. On the basis of received message the receiver transmits his or her emotions and feelings as feedback. In this communication process there is a noise which influences and affects the total process of communication. This model give sthe importance of two way from of communication, according to him communication is incomplete if you don not respond. This model breaks the process of communication in to 8 coumponents
Source:
Message:
Transmitter (telephone, tv, face n face)
Signal: is hat flows through the channel (sounds or written word)
Carrier:
Noise (may confuse the carried signal) :
Receiver :
Destination: person who consumes and process the information
BERLO MODEL OF COMMUNICATION: this is among the famous communication model which stresses on the relationship between the person selling the message and the receiver. According to this model for the message to be properly encoded and decoded the communication skills of both the sender and receiver should be at best. This model has 4 main components and each component has some components describing the assisting factors for each

MAIN COMPONENTS
Source
Communication skills:
Attitude: for proper communication the source and receiver should share the attitude.
Knowledge:
Social system:
Culture: it may lead to communication breakdown
Message:
Content: share the topic of discussion.
Elements: the elements should match with both sides
Treatment: how does the message treat the source and the receiver. Should be under same treatment.
Code:
Channel:
Hearing: from source and receiver , before communicating you need to know the status of the audience.
Seeing: the source or receiver must be seeing each other Touching:
Smelling:
Receiver
Communication skills:
Attitude:
Knowledge:
Social system; share where you belong
Culture: it may lead to the communication breakdown.

TYPES OF COMMUNICATION

There are 3 basics types of communication which include

VERBAL COMMUNICATION
NON VERBAL COMMUNICATION
WRITTEN COMMUNICATION

VERBAL COMMUNICATION: when message or information is exchanged or communicated through words then we refer to that process as verbal communication. It may be in written form or in oral form. It takes place through case to face conversation, group discussion, counseling, interview, radio and television, phones, memos, reports and emails.

- This is the expression of information through language which is composed of words and grammar, this means that it has to be grammatical. it consists of sharing thoughts and ideas by using words.

-It is the process of exchanging information between 2 or more persons through written sounds and spoken words. We use sounds and language to convey the message. It serves as a vehicle for expressing desires, ideas and concepts and it is a vital process in learning and teaching.

-This is not independent it employs other types of communication in this case it employs non verbal. It may be interpersonal communication or public speaking. Public speaking involves one or more people delivering a message to a group of people
- signs and symbols are the major signals that make up verbal communication. Words act like symbols and signs are secondary products of the underlined message.

The main function of verbal communication is to convey a message to one or more recipients or receivers directly. This is accompanied by non linguistic features like tone or voice, facial expressions and body language. In verbal communication we inform, we inquire, we argue and discuss different topics.

CHALLENGES OF VERBAL COMMUNICATION.

in verbal communication the audience normally faces the problem of misunderstanding. This is cause by poor word choice by the speaker.

Different perspectives: this means how a person regards a certain thing.

Techniques used to present your ideas. Do you use direct approach or indirect or maybe flashback?

Tonation this is related to sound, such as speaking too low or the rise and fall.

Pronunciation: this is when people do not speak out the word properly they have pronunciation problems.

Language barrier:

Knowledge you have may affect verbal communication: some people may have a knowledge and will not be able to use that knowledge.

In order to avoid these challenges when communicating verbally you need to consider the message you wish to communicate before speaking or communicating with the respective audience. You have to know if the message you are going to present suitable for that audience. Normally speak clearly, pronounce words correctly, be conscious with other non verbal features like eye contact, gesture and facial expression.

IMPORTANCE OF VERBAL COMMUNICATION

Verbal communication has the ability to confuse, clarify, encourage, instruct or teach. We experience verbal communication in our daily life, when we listen to news, when attending interviews and when we tell stories to our friends.

Verbal communication is the beginning of communication process, meaning it is the basic form that we use to communicate daily.
We use it to inform and give knowledge in different settings for example in the class room we give knowledge by using verbal communication.
It is also used to clarify issues when there is misunderstanding or there is not enough information provided.
It is also used if there is something which is done wrongly or incorrectly.
This is the best type of communication which gives perfect feedback. The feedback is very essential in communication since it improves relationship within a family, school or institution.
Verbal communication has great influential powers, when you speak verbally you use various technique to influence the audience to understand you as well. Which is basically concerning the sound of your voice.
A lot of what we communicate is communicated through non verbal communication but the content of what we communicate most of it comes through verbal communication.

NON VERBAL COMMUNCATION:
What we say is a vital part of any communication but what you do not say can be more vital. Some researches have shown that 55% of impersonal (within you) communication comes from non verbal communication, 7% of the received message is based on the sender's actual words, 38% of any speech is based on para language meaning the tone, pronunciation and the volume of speech. In the interviews non verbal clues affect the speaker whether to get a job or not. Job skills are assessed through non verbal clues that are shown by the candidates. How we appear before the board communicates extra non verbal meaning.
To be effective communicators we need to align our body language, appearance and tone of the words we are trying to speak out. In non verbal communication we listen up and learn more. Tone is another element of non verbal communication that affects the message, the change or tone should be don purposely.

-Example I do not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. I did not tell john you were late. (The underlined part shows emphasis) non verbal communication is always supported by the following

ELEMENTS OF NON VERBAL COMMUNICATION

BODY LANGUAGE:
- A firm hand shake. A firm handshake shows that there you are confident and
- A weak handshake shows uncertainty.
-Folded hands
- standing with one leg folded
(2) EYE CONTACT:
the duration taken during eye contact matters in communication or even business or any situation. Apart from that we get extra meaning from eye contact. If someone is settled, then the eyes will be settled.

FACIAL EXPRESSION: human face expresses a thousands of different expressions
It expresses emotions and feelings
It expresses happiness and sadness
It expresses basic information which can not be captured by other communication channel.

Happiness is always associated with an open mouth and slightly closed eyes

Fear is also curtained with open mouth while open mouth plus wide open eyes.
Flitting eyes and puzzled lips; conveys lack of trust.

POSTURE: how a person positions his or her body.
TOUCH: there is gentle touch and strong touch.
SPACE: distance between the speaker and the audience

WRITTEN COMMUNICATION:

This is anything or any message that is printed, or written it belongs to the group of written communication, this is inevitable meaning we read it everyday. It involves memos, proposal, email, letters, books, training manuals and operating policies.

-memo: short information proposal: this is a long writing where by done when writing a research operating policies: are government documents.
These materials may be written on the paper, hand written or appear on the screen such as projectors.

A written text can be short or long depending on what you want to express. The sender may be one or a group of people but normally it is only 1 sender where by the receivers are many people or groups of people.

This is an official way of communication and it is preferred in most serious cases example the plaint given in court or also the defense as well should be written where by it is official. Most of the job agreements are done in written communication and it is believed that more then 67 salaries are done by writing.

Written communication has great influence in today's business activities and developing sectors emphasizes on written communication, it has got a great significance. Writing is more significant than any other means of communication. Therefore, for running our business we need to deploy effective writing.

Effective writing: is a kind of writing that involves careful selection of words, sentences, as well as paragraphs. It is comfortable to the audience.

ADAVANTAGES OF WRITTEN COMMUNICATION

Helps in laying down principals, policies as well as rules for any running organization. Example the constitution.
It is a permanent means of communication therefore used where records are needed for future use.
Helps in proper delegation of responsibilities in a certain organization.
It is more precise and clearly understood.
It is used as a defense in court, example used as evidence.
Provides records and references

DIS ADVANTAGES OF WRITTEN COMMUNICATION

It is expensive in terms of time and cost.
Written communication does not receive or accept immediate changes.
If the readers are at a far distance it is difficult for a writer to clear out their doubts or questions.
Requires great skills and competence in the language as well as vocabs used.
There is too much paper work is tiresome and boring

PRINCIPALS OF EFFECTIVE WRITING

When we write to a friend, colleague, client or any business partner our content must be clear and precise, persuasive and accurate and confident.

TIPS OF EFFECTIVE WRITING

Avoid being too verbal (many words which are not necessary)
Choose shorter words which are clearly understood.
Use objective subject lines, means the sentences should be objective and should reflect the content of the message.
Decide your audience, as in being aware of your audience example 1st year law student at Tumaini meaning the writer will use legal language. Choose correct words which would be understood by your audience. If your audience is professional use technical words.
Request for action from the audience. When you write never leave the readers with guess work, or with a question what next, don't write a text which will never give you results.
Share your message with strategy, do not over load your audience. Meaning you need to tune and make your message soft. You can divide your message according to the level of knowledge of your audience. Use simple language for people with low knowledge Logically format your document, make sure that the content is linked to the subject don't write just because you are writing. Make sure whatever you write it is connected to the one above and the one below.
Be persuasive, address one one thing to one reader then addressing many to many people.
Engage your audience, meaning talk to your audience. Sometimes people may write but they don't speak to their audience, you should be focused to your audience.
Check your message before you send it, you have to proof read your writing. Such as taking out all errors, grammatical problems or spellings. (your brain thinks faster then the way you write)

) COMMUNICATION FLOWS / COMMUNICATION MODULE
there are 4 main communication flows in any organization downward communication flow:

this is a kind of communication in which information flows from a higher level to the lower, from the superior to the subordinates, such as (commands) in a chain of command. This communication is used by managers to transmit work related information to the employees at the lower level. It is used by the managers for the following purposes.

- providing feedback on employees' performance
- giving job instructions (commanding language)
- providing a complete understanding of the employee's job as well as to communicate to them how their job is related to other jobs in the organization.
- to communicate the organization's mission and vision to their employees.
- to highlight areas of attention.

NB: organization publication, circulars, letters to the employees as well as group meetings are good example of downward communication and the managers must do them.

In order to have an effective downward communication the managers should do the following specify communication objective (why you wrote the letter) ensure that the message is accurate specific and non ambiguous.

Utilize the best communication technique to convey the message to the receiver in a right form.

OBJECTIVES OF DOWNWARD COMMUNICATION

To give directions to the subordinates where by the language used is commanding language
To explain policies (regulations or procedures necessary in an institution).
To distribute work load
To motivate the employees (encouraging the employees in terms of command)
To upraise performance (the managers usually evaluate the performance of the employees so they can know their strength and weaknesses.
To inform the employees about their job rational.

ADAVANTAGES OF DOWNWARD COMMUNICATION FLOW

Organizational discipline (it follows the hierarchy in communication)
It increases efficiency in work (it offers directions and instructions which must be fulfilled by the subordinate Downward communication increase effective communication of the goals or aims of the organization. The upper management communicate the aims to the subordinate so as to achieve the goals.
It makes the delegation of power easy (chain of command)

DIS ADVANTAGES OF DOWNWARD COMMUNICATION

There is some distortion of the message (the message may change some how)
There is slow feedback (it takes time for the message to reach to the lower level and takes time for the feedback to come back)
Interpreting problems (the message may be misunderstood by the subordinate)
It is not motivating (making the subordinates like machines some times they get tired)

EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION (SEVEN C’s)

When we talk about effective communication one thing comes into our mind that is basic principals of effective communication. When you talk about effective communication is that the intentions of the speaker have reached the receiver. These principals tell us that how your message can become effective for your can become effective for your target crew, they also tell us about style and importance of the message. These principals known as seven C’s of effective communication include the following

SEVEN C’s
Completeness:
Conciseness:
Consideration:
Concreteness:
Clarity:
Courtesy:
Correctness:

The message from the receiver either listener or reader desires a complete information. The complete information answers 5 W questions.

Who What

When
Why
Where

)COMPLETENESS . The five question methods is normally used when you write requests, announcements and other informative message. For instance, if you want to order something from the industry you should make clear of what you want, when you need it and where is to to be sent. But you should also provide necessary information behind your item and other related information so as to get what you deserve.

CONCISENESS: It means to convey the message by using fewest words. This is a prior condition to effective business communication. It saves the time and expenses for both party. To achieve the conciseness, you have to consider the following.

Avoided wordy expressions
Include only relevant materials
Avoid unnecessary repetitions: example an expression meet me at this time “at this time” could be meet me now.
Always try to use to the point approach in your communication.
always try to provide relevant information to the receiver of the message.

OBESERVE THE FOLLOWING KEY ISSUES FOR A MESSAGE TO BE CONCERENED

stick to the purpose or point of the message.
delete irrelevant words.
Avoid long introduction and unnecessary explanation.
Get to the main point perfectly.

AVOIDING UN NECESSARY REPETION: sometimes repletion is necessary especially when you focus on a certain point. A lot of public speakers do that. But when the same thing is said without 2 or 3 reasons the message becomes wordy. Always use shorter names after you have used the longer one for the first time. Use pronouns or initials of the longer words example World Trade Organization (WTO), Information Technology (IT)

CONSIDERATION:
Always consider the receiver's interests and intentions, it is very important in effective communication to always keep in mind your target group while writing. This is a very important principal among the seven c's in communication normally focuses on you instead of I and we, taking yourself out of the scenario example instead of saying I sentence you, you say you are sentenced. Do not use I and we in writing. Show the audience benefits or interests of the receiver, emphasize positive and pleasant facts. Using you helps you but over use leads to negative reaction. Always write a message in a way that the audience will benefit from it, always try to address their needs. The message should be specific instead of general. Misunderstanding of words creates a problem for both parties. When you talk to your clients always use facts and figures instead of irrelevant information,

CONCRETENESS: to be concrete always use specific facts and figures but again use image building words (figures of speech)
He is very intelligent in class and stood first in class. (general)
James's GPA in LLB evening session was 4.9 out of 5, he stood first in his class. (concrete).

Always write on a very solid ground meaning with details ad specific facts. A complete message should definitely create a good image.

CLARITY: accuracy is the purpose of clarity; in effective business communication the message should be very clear so that the reader can understand it easily. You should always choose precise words rather than longer statements. Construct effective sentences and paragraphs. You should try your level best to use familiar words and easy words be understood by your audience. Instead of using "DOMICILE" use "HOME" . instead of using statement for payment you use invoice. Instead of using subsequent use after.

COURTESY: Knowing your audience allows you to use statement of courtesy, always be aware of your message receiver. True purpose involves being aware not only of the perspective of the other but also their feelings. it relies on the sincere attitude of your audience. Normally apply socially accepted manners in your message so as to be courteous, the use of words like God Bless You. This principal basis on the mood of the audience. Use polite language that has respect and concerns about the particular matter. Courteous communication generates a special tone in writing and speaking.

SUGGESTION FOR GENERATING A COURTEOUS TONE

Be sincerely, tactful, thoughtful and expressive. (think beyond what they think).
Use expressions that show respect for adults.
Choose non discriminatory expressions so as to be courteous.
Example

It is a stupid letter I can't understand
I should understand as there is no confusing word in this letter, could you please explain it once again. More courteous because it considers the audience.
It is your fault you did not read properly my latest fax.
Sometimes my wording is not precise, let me try again. (more courteous)
