Kapasa Makasa University
School of Agriculture and Aquaculture
Chinsali Zambia

SA 330 Animal Husbandry Assignment Two

Instructions: Answer all the questions, they all carry 10 equal marks each.

1.0 Explain how you would physically differentiate a normal and a sick animal on a farm and what kind of measures would you need to take in order to confirm your suspitions about the animal being sick?

2.0 Explain the biosecurity measures you may wish to implement on the farm to control the occurrence and spread of animal diseases on the farm?

3.0 What is passive immunity and how would you differentiate this kind of immunity from active immunity and how an animal acquire the active immunity?

4.0 What measures would you need to consider in order to control external and internal parasites in farm animals?

5.0 Explain why it is important to provide animals with housing and what factors are you likely to consider when constructing housing for pigs and poultry?

6.0 Explain the importance of stunning or immobilizing animals before slaughter and why should we treat the animals humanely beore they are slaughtered as food animals?

7.0 Explain the steps that must be followed for humane slaughter of animals for food and what is the importance of each step?

8.0 What are the main quality characteristics for meat and how would you render the meat mature and tender through post-slaughter handling?

9.0 Discuss the importance of eggs in the human diet and how do they compare with that of milk as a wholesome complete food for providing all nutrients required for growth and development of human beings?

10. Explain the key differences among monoculture, mixed agriculture and intergrated agriculture and by giving at least two examples of each, highlight some of the examples where you can integrate production of different crops, crops with livestock and that of crops, livestock and acquaculture?